Transit pledge proves tempting

▶ NDP vow to cover half of operating costs catches attention of TTC chair ▶ Plan is contingent on promise to freeze fares

DECISION ONTARIO

She's known as a right-leaning city councillor, but TTC chair Karen Stintz doesn't deny the appeal of the Ontario NDP's public-transit platform. After all, the city has been asking the province to restore its transit operating subsidy for years.

Ontario NDP Leader Andrea Horwath has promised that if she wins the Oct. 6 election, her party will take over nearly half of Toronto's operating subsidy of about $500 million annually for the TTC, including Wheel-Trans.

"It would be a huge contribution," allowing the TTC the reliable funding it needs to operate strategically rather than lurching from one financial crisis to the next, said Stintz.

The NDP promise, contingent on a promise to freeze fares for four years, would be worth about $225 million a year. To put that in context, the TTC has just agreed to pack its buses tighter, reduce service, cut about 1,000 jobs, evict dialysis patients from Wheel-Trans and consider a 10 cent fare hike in the name of eliminating a $101-million projected operating shortfall in 2012.

KATE ALLEN/TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

"Toronto needs to figure out what its fundamentals are before we have a further conversation. The city is in a discussion about all its services. The TTC is just one part of that."
INCUMBENT TRANSPORTATION MINISTER KATHLEEN WYNNE

But growing the system would require some flexibility on the issue of the fare freeze, said Stintz.

Left-leaning transit blogger Steve Munro agrees, estimating the TTC's operating needs will grow by about six per cent — about $90 million annually, not including new costs such as opening the Spadina subway extension.

"In four years, the TTC's costs will be $360 million greater than they are today, and if all of this goes to the subsidy account, that will bring Toronto to a subsidy level above $800 million. The provincial share would be more than the entire amount set aside by the NDP for this program in their budget estimates (of $375 million by 2015-2016)," writes Munro.

Applause as Port Lands plan passes unanimously

Doug Ford, who was lobbying colleagues late last week to affirm a Sept. 6 executive committee vote to seize the Port Lands, sat rigid through debate

TARA WALTON/TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

▶ City Coun. Mike Layton is applauded by fellow councillors following his tribute to his late father, Jack Layton, during yesterday's meeting of city council.

In a rare show of calm after choppy debate that roiled the city, council voted unanimously yesterday to stick with, and speed up, the current Port Lands development plan.

All councillors, plus members of the public gallery, erupted in applause after the final vote. Many councillors then stood and turned toward the gallery, giving members of the public an ovation for their guiding input.

Among the handful who remained seated were Mayor Rob Ford and Coun. Doug Ford, whose zeal to replace Waterfront Toronto's mixed-use neighbourhood plan with flashier, attractions-based development helped spark the debate.

Nod for Doug Ford

- Opponents. During congratulatory speeches about a motion that ditched the mayor's plan to seize control of the Port Lands from Waterfront Toronto, even left-leaning opponents gave Doug Ford a nod, saying his boisterous talk of a mega-mall, Ferris wheel and monorail helped focus public attention on the future of the neglected lakefront.
- Raising the issue. "Councillor Ford, you done good," said Coun. Pam McConnell, whose Ward 28 includes part of the Port Lands. "You raised the issue and we're here to resolve the flurry of discussions."

Man shot by Toronto cop, SIU confirms

The Special Investigations Unit has confirmed that a Toronto police officer shot a 24-year-old man "at least once" on Monday.

Ankur Patel remains in serious condition at St. Michael's Hospital after he was shot around 1:30 p.m. Monday near the Eaton Centre.

Police spokeswoman Const. Wendy Drummond said the shooting involved "a person with a knife."

Toronto city council has voted unanimously to require that pet stores obtain cats and dogs from humane societies, shelters and rescue groups.

The aim is to block stores from obtaining pets from puppy mills.

"The goal is to stop animal cruelty," said Coun. Glenn De Baeremaeker. "I think this is a wonderful day in the city of Toronto for anyone who loves cats, dogs, puppies, and wants to ensure animals are treated humanely."

Judge takes on Halton cops

- Accuses officers of excessive force in two cases
- Recommends they be sent for retraining

RANDY QUAN/TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

▶ Justice Lesley Baldwin

A provincial court judge in Halton has taken on police in the region, releasing two rulings in less than a month that rebuke officers for using excessive force.

One officer, Const. Erich Paroshy, who works at Halton's Burlington division, is named in both cases, one of which resulted in a man's broken arm and the other with a man pepper-sprayed in the face.

In both rulings, Ontario Court Justice Lesley Baldwin came down hard on the officers and suggested they be retrained in the appropriate use of force.

In the first ruling, released on Aug. 19, Baldwin acquitted Kyle Davidson of assaulting a peace officer, resisting arrest and being intoxicated in public in June 2009.

Police believed the 26-year-old had kicked at a police cruiser. In the struggle to arrest him, Davidson's left arm was fractured by Const. Paroshy.

Calling police conduct "harsh and callous," Baldwin dismissed the charges.

In the second ruling, released on Sept. 8, Baldwin acquitted brothers Bogumil and Stanislaw Dyrda of assaulting a peace officer, stemming from an incident in January 2009 when Bogumil Dyrda was disoriented after a car crash. Police, believing him intoxicated, placed him under arrest, and a struggle ensued.

Baldwin rejected the officers' evidence that they smelled alcohol and said the case "involved the excessive use of police force."

Joseph Bloomenfeld, the Dyrda brothers' defence lawyer, said Baldwin's rulings took "courage."

"She had the strength to write a judgment that's going to ... impact on people that she deals with all the time," he said.

Halton police said they were aware of Baldwin's latest judgment, and the Professional Standards Bureau is conducting an investigation, spokesman Dave Cross said.

A thriving arts community is key to building a vibrant, attractive city, Calgary Mayor Naheed Nenshi said yesterday in Toronto, calling his theory "the ballet effect." "Everyone wants to live in a city that has a great ballet, even if they themselves will never go to the ballet," he told CBC News. Nenshi is also visiting other cities in eastern Canada.

Drum teacher acquitted of touching student

A former rock drummer has been found not guilty of fondling a little girl, now 9 years old, while giving her music lessons.

Brian Bolliger, 55, was a drummer with True Myth, a progressive rock group from London, Ont., which put out two albums in 1979 and 1981. He had taught music for 29 years.

For more than two years, Bolliger gave the girl weekly drum lessons, but in 2010 she complained to her mother that Bolliger had touched her.

The Crown suggested that he put his hand down the girl's pants and shirt while she practised the drums in his studio.

Bolliger repeatedly denied the allegations. "That's not me," he insisted.

Judge William Bassel dismissed the charges yesterday, saying there were inconsistencies in the girl's testimony and the Crown had not proved the offence "beyond a reasonable doubt."

Food bank use down

Food bank use in the Greater Toronto Area has eased to less than 1.1 million visits in the past year, the Daily Bread Food Bank says in its annual report.

But those numbers remain "unacceptably high" and are still 14 per cent above 2008, before the recession hit, the report says.

Of 1,082,000 visits to GTA food banks between March 2010 and March 2011, most visits — 908,000 — were in Toronto. That is down from almost 1.2 million visits in the GTA in 2009.

Housing costs are the main reason people go hungry, the report says.

A town seduced by the written word

Uxbridgians are wild about the written word Also nuts about knitting, as it pairs well with reading

Their lives are an open book.

And no one turns the pages faster or with more fervour than the bookworms of Uxbridge.

"We love our books in this town," declares Ellen Skinner, who devours four a week and keeps a pillow on the floor to catch her e-reader in case she dozes off late at night.

Sure, lit lovers are everywhere. But consider this: Uxbridge boasts 28 book clubs, including one that has met for 104 years.

And people don't just read the stories — they live them, as they did when the downtown core was magically transformed into Harry Potter's world of Hogsmeade a few years back.

Literary legends

The township of 19,000 has bragging rights as Lucy Maud Montgomery's home for 15 years.

- Legends like Timothy Findley, Michael Ondaatje, and Yann Martel didn't need to be asked twice to drop in for readings.

Uxbridge, in Durham region northeast of Toronto, is also home to one of Canada's most beloved bookstores, Blue Heron, whose owner Shelley Macbeth's love of literature "take(s) reading to a new level," says a fan who helped the 22-year-old shop into Canada's top 10 favourites in a CBC survey. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Parties perfect message control

Prime minister used strict media control to win federal election ◐ Strategy helps shield candidates

DECISION ONTARIO

Dalton McGuinty and Tim Hudak may spend their days on the campaign trail attacking each other, but there's one thing the Ontario political rivals agree on — the desire to control their message by severely limiting media access.

"They've obviously looked at what Prime Minister (Stephen) Harper has managed to do and thought 'Well, what's good for him is good for us,' " April Lindgren, professor of journalism at Ryerson University, said of McGuinty and Hudak.

9 a.m. The usual time Dalton McGuinty and Tim Hudak hold their only media availability of the day.

"This is what I think is a tragedy really for public accountability, because if reporters aren't going to ask those questions, who will? It's not going to be the party faithful."

Harper's tightly scripted photo-ops, rallies and announcements are closely mirrored in the current Ontario campaign by both McGuinty's Liberal camp and Hudak's Tory campaign.

The goal is to force reporters to limit their questions to the only new topic of the day, the one the leader just announced — or more frequently re-announced — even though the campaign will often be on the road for another 12 hours that day and face many other issues.

McGuinty is running what critics call a "bubble" campaign, where the leader is mostly protected from reporters. Hudak's campaign is slightly looser, while NDP Leader Andrea Horwath has a more open approach compared to her opponents.

NDP offer support to mothers

NDP Leader Andrea Horwath yesterday repeated her call for Ontario voters to put a woman in the province's top job as she pledged to provide more support to new mothers and babies.

Horwath, the single mother of a teenage son, took her feminist message to the Midwifery Collective of Toronto, where she greeted a line of young women cradling their infants.

An NDP government would do more for young mothers by developing a breastfeeding strategy and creating four new birthing centres staffed by midwives, she said.

The location of the four birthing centres would be based on need, a party spokeswoman said.

Hudak pledges no tax hikes

Ontario voters can take it to the bank that a Progressive Conservative government would not raise taxes, Tory Leader Tim Hudak said yesterday.

At a campaign event at a family home, Hudak released a letter containing his party's no-tax-hike pledge, while asking Premier Dalton McGuinty to make the same promise.

Arab Spring a sign of hope: UN

New United Nations General Assembly opens World must find solution for Israel-Palestinian peace: Sarkozy

SPENCER PLATT/GETTY IMAGES

▶ French President Nicolas Sarkozy

Global leaders pointed to democratic uprisings across the Arab world as a sign of hope in a world wracked by conflict, climate change and other crises yesterday.

The Arab Spring that saw peaceful protesters rise up against repressive regimes was a major focus of this year's ministerial meeting, along with the Palestinians' bid for UN membership.

"From Tunis to Cairo, from Tripoli to Damascus, from Benghazi to Sanaa, populations too long crushed by oppression rose up and claimed the right to be free at last," French President Nicolas Sarkozy said.

Sarkozy proposed an Israel-Palestinian peace process timetable, with talks to resume in a month and a final deal to be reached in one year as part of a stepped-up effort to push Palestinian leaders to abandon an application for full UN membership that the U.S. and Israel oppose.

The Palestinians have pledged to submit their request for full statehood this week, a move the U.S. has said it will veto if it comes before the UN Security Council, where it holds a permanent seat.

UN Secretary General Ban Ki-moon said the Palestinians deserve a state, Israel needs security and the stalemate over reviving negotiations must be broken. He pledged the UN's "unrelenting efforts to help achieve that peace through a negotiated settlement."

Rallies ahead of statehood bid

Thousands of flag-waving Palestinians rallied yesterday in towns across the West Bank to show support for their president's bid to win UN recognition of a Palestinian state. The Palestinians plan to submit their application tomorrow.

No shortcut to peace: Obama

U.S. President Barack Obama said yesterday there could be no shortcut to peace between Israel and the Palestinians, as he sought to head off a UN showdown over Palestinian statehood.

Tiny Italian island rocked by new clashes

Incident prompts authorities to vow all migrants would be transferred and repatriated within 48 hours

SKY TG24/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

▶ Migrants clash with police in Lampedusa yesterday in this TV screengrab.

Migrants clashed with police and residents on the tiny Italian island of Lampedusa yesterday.

Television footage showed riot police wielding clubs and beating the migrants as they jumped from a balcony near the island's commercial port.

The clashes came a day after migrants set their overcrowded holding centre on fire to protest Italy's policy of forced repatriations.

Some 26,000 Tunisians and 28,000 people of other nationalities from Libya have arrived in Lampedusa this year since the beginning of the Arab revolts. Residents on the island have complained they are being overwhelmed with migrants and are bearing the entire EU's immigration burden alone.

Clashes broke out yesterday as some residents hurled stones at migrants who were threatening to blow up some gas canisters, news reports said.

Angry residents also assaulted TV crews and other journalists covering the rioting, telling them to leave the island alone.

The clashes left several people injured, the reports said.

▶ Yemeni opposition supporters gather on a billboard stand yesterday to watch a funeral for protesters killed in clashes with forces loyal to Yemeni President Ali Abdullah Saleh.

Loyalists in Yemen re-ignite violence

Troops flout ceasefire, killing 16 people in attacks

Yemeni government forces yesterday fired mortars at tens of thousands of mourners at funerals held for protesters killed in clashes. They also attacked an opposition base, shattering a ceasefire negotiated a day earlier to end the Arab nation's latest bout of deadly violence. The two attacks killed 16 people.

The mourners were gathered for funeral prayers for anti-government protesters killed in a deadly, three-day government crackdown in which the death toll topped 80.

It was a sudden spike in violence explained by protesters' impatience with their longtime president, Ali Abdullah Saleh, who they say is dragging his feet instead of signing a deal to step down. Nine people were killed.

Also in Sanaa, the headquarters of the renegade 1st Armored Division came under heavy shelling from government forces killing seven, including two civilians, and injuring 10. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

▶ Suspects, from left, Ryan Edward , Lee Grace and Dylan Stanley Dougherty. The siblings are accused of a cross country crime spree before they were arrested Aug. 10 in Colorado.

Trio headed for hideout?

Police say bank robbery netted fugitive siblings $5,200 At least nine firearms retrieved from vehicle

A sister and two brothers had planned to head to Mexico with money stolen in a Georgia bank robbery, then obtain fraudulent documents and elude authorities before the trio, now accused in a cross-country crime spree, were caught in Colorado, a detective said.

The details in the case emerged during a hearing Tuesday, with Colorado Springs police Det. Larry Dyer saying the youngest of the three, Ryan Edward Dougherty, 21, told him that he hatched the idea the day he was sentenced to register as a sex offender. Dougherty had earlier been convicted of sending sexually explicit text messages to an 11-year-old girl.

Colorado District Judge Claude Appel ruled that prosecutors had enough evidence to place Dougherty, his brother Dylan Stanley Dougherty, 26, and their sister Lee Grace Dougherty, 29, on trial for crimes related to a high-speed chase and shootout.

The siblings are accused of bank robbery, shooting at police officers and they are suspected of two car thefts. None have entered pleas. A scheduling conference was set for tomorrow.

▶ Clifford Olson is led away from court in Regina, Sask., on April 4, 1996.

Few tears shed for dying Olson

Clifford Olson, Canada's most reviled serial killer, is just days from death, families of his victims say.

The news sparked an outpouring of vitriol yesterday.

A national newspaper was forced to block most of the public commentary on its website — an illustration of how Canada feels about Olson.

"A good-news story," wrote one reader.

"His final judgment will be in a higher court," said another.

Sharon Rosenfeldt, the mother of one of Olson's 11 victims, said Olson — serving 11 concurrent life terms — has been moved to a hospital in Quebec.

Rosenfeldt said she was told by a Corrections Canada official that the 71-year-old killer's cancer has spread.

Firm to spill Wiki chief's secrets

Memoir out today Assange tried to cancel it

A long-awaited memoir by WikiLeaks founder Julian Assange is finally being published — without his approval.

British publisher Canongate said yesterday the book, billed as an "unauthorized autobiography," will go on sale in stores and online today.

Canongate paid 40-year-old Assange for the rights to the memoir last year.'

But Canongate said Assange tried to cancel his contract, but since he had not repaid his advance it had decided to publish the first draft he delivered.

Assange has gained fame as the face of the secrets-spilling website.

Grisly rush-hour find

Gunmen dump 35 bodies on city street in Mexico
Local media reported 12 of the victims were women

Suspected drug traffickers dumped 35 bodies at rush hour beneath a busy overpass in the heart of Veracruz city, Mexico, as gunmen pointed weapons at frightened drivers.

Horrified motorists sent Twitter messages warning others to avoid the area near the biggest shopping mall in Boca del Rio, part of the metropolitan area of Veracruz city.

The gruesome gesture marked a sharp escalation in cartel violence in Veracruz state, which sits on a route for drugs and Central American migrants heading north. The Zetas drug cartel has been battling other gangs for control of the state.

Veracruz state Attorney General Reynaldo Escobar Perez said the bodies were left piled in two trucks and on the ground under the overpass. Among the bodies was a local police officer who had gone missing two weeks ago. Many of the victims were strangled, some bled to death and one person had been shot.

State Gov. Javier Duarte said an intelligence database shows that all 35 victims had a criminal background.

Recent incidents in France and Japan are reminders of nuclear danger

Editor Melita Kuburas tours ground zero and villages surrounding site of the world's worst nuclear disaster

Into the radiation zone: Metro visits Chornobyl

MELITA KUBURAS
@METRONEWS.CA
IN UKRAINE

Security guards at the entrance to the 30-kilometre exclusion zone have a list of rules for our group as we wait to enter the contaminated area.

"Do not touch anything, wear long sleeves and closed-toe shoes." This is followed by a stern caution from the guide taking UN Development Programme volunteers inside. "Remember, you are not tourists here."

After the recent Fukushima disaster in Japan, the International Atomic Energy Agency announced this week a projected slowdown on the growth of nuclear power. Chornobyl to this day is evidence of what happens when things go wrong.

More than 25 years after the Chornobyl meltdown, about 3,500 people are still required at the plant just to keep safety mechanisms operating. It can't be fully shut down. Another 3,000 work as maintenance, security and decontamination staff outside of it — although they only work two weeks a month, due to high radiation levels.

Standing in front of reactor No. 4, which is enclosed in an aging, rusted tomb called the "sarcophagus," our beeping hand-held dosimeter shows external radiation levels to be about 30 times higher than in the capital, Kyiv.

"But this isn't the most radioactive place we will see," the guide says with a sardonic grin. "I will show you where it's much higher."

This spot turns out to be a patch of moss behind the cultural centre in the abandoned town of Prypiat. The town used to be home to about 50,000 people who evacuated in about three hours the day after the accident.

To avoid panic, residents were told they would be returning to their homes, so they packed light. Their belongings were left to decay, were destroyed in the decontamination process or were stolen by looters. Some personal items are still strewn amid the rubble — Soviet posters, children's books, an old tennis shoe in the Cultural Centre's gymnasium. The town today is just decrepit buildings amid overgrown foliage.

▶ Giovanni Mozzarelli, program officer at the United Nations Development Programme in Ukraine, holds a dosimeter in front of nuclear reactor No. 4 in Chornobyl during a day trip to the exclusion zone on Aug. 30. The external-radiation reading on the beeping dosimeter showed levels to be about 30 times higher than in Ukraine's capital, Kyiv.

Reactor rupture

- On April 26, 1986, an explosion and fires at Chornobyl nuclear plant's reactor No. 4 caused the largest radioactive release in the civil nuclear industry's history.
- 100,000 people were evacuated.
- 2,293 villages and towns were contaminated.

Subsidies little more than small potatoes

MELITA KUBURAS/METRO

▶ Two women carry potatoes grown within Chornobyl Zone 3. Potatoes are what most people depend on for sustenance during the winter or as a means of modest income.

While the Ukraine government is legally bound to deliver subsidies to those living in affected regions, the average resident receives the equivalent of less than 50 cents per month.

That's not nearly enough, considering that they had been promised salary bonuses for finding work and money to pay for students' breakfasts.

Dmytro Petrushenko, head of the Bordianka District State administration, said that if all of the promised subsidies were paid out in full, it would amount to one fifth of Ukraine's entire state budget.

"We need a radical change — an elimination of all subsidies," the government official advocates.

Price rise temporary, experts say

Canada's inflation rate jumped last month, but with the economy's foundations in quicksand, there is little prospect of a Bank of Canada response.

The gain in the consumer price index to 3.1 per cent, from 2.7 in July, reverses a recent trend towards more moderate inflation.

Bank of Canada governor Mark Carney and most analysts remain convinced that the higher-than-expected price increases are due to temporary factors.

Bank of Montreal economist Michael Gregory adds that August's jump was also partly due to one-off "administered" increases, such as adjustments to electricity rates and insurance premiums.

Statistics Canada said gasoline and food continue to be big drivers of annual inflation.

Apple to unveil iPhone 5

Device on sale in U.S. within few weeks of announcement, sources say

MARK LENNIHAN/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS FILE

▶ Tim Cook, Apple's new CEO, is expected to reinforce his credibility as the new leader of the world's largest company by "quarterbacking" the iPhone 5 announcement.

Apple's newly minted CEO Tim Cook is expected to make his first big product announcement on Oct. 4, the day sources say Apple will launch the highly anticipated iPhone 5.

AllThingsD, a widely trusted tech blog, pegged the early October date after months of speculation and conflicting reports. Of course, the blog stipulated that Apple could switch the date at any time.

The pressure is on Cook to live up to Steve Jobs' famous announcements, where the now-legendary co-founder of Apple would convince millions to buy the company's latest and greatest technology.

To reinforce his credibility as the new leader of the world's largest company, Cook will likely "quarterback" the announcement, according to AllThingsD.

The Twitterverse was in an uproar on the news, with "Apple to announce iPhone 5" trending worldwide for the majority of yesterday morning.

No word yet when iPhone lovers in Canada will get a chance to buy the product. Fans on this side of the border had to sit tight for one month after the American launch of the iPhone 4 in June 2010.

Like it or not, Facebook overhauls your home page

Facebook has launched the biggest overhaul of users' home pages in years, upping the stakes against competitors and providing "a nearly constant stream of stuff to look at," according to one tech analyst.

The new News Feed, the latest and largest in a month of roll-outs, eliminates the need to toggle from new posts to top posts and combines all the "top stories" at the top, marked with a blue corner.

FACEBOOK.COM

▶ Mark Tonkelowitz

What you see is determined by how often you visit your page, what your relationship is to the person posting, and what type of story it is, Facebook programmer Mark Tonkelowitz said in a blog.

"News Feed will act more like your own personal newspaper," said Tonkelowitz. "All your news will be in a single stream with the most interesting stories featured at the top."

The other major change to users' home pages is the Ticker, a right-hand column that streams live content from "friends."

If you haven't visited Facebook for a while, the first things you'll see are top photos and statuses posted while you've been away. The Ticker has been in testing for weeks, TechCrunch.com quoted Facebook VP of Engineering Mike Schroepfer as saying.

Finally, Facebook is boosting the size of photo thumbnails in your feed, which makes them nicer to look at (and more inviting to click on).

TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Changes on way:

- Mini-Feed. A constant updating of each person's personal profile.
- Subscribe button. Allows users to filter what they see from "friends" in News Feed.
- Friends Lists. Rather than require users to painstakingly sort their "friends" into family, close friend or co-worker categories, Facebook now does it for you. (As Google + does).

CRTC lays down new rules for TV

Telus, Rogers call it a win for consumers BCE, Quebecor had called for exclusive deals for new devices

The CRTC is blocking companies from offering television programs exclusively to their mobile or Internet subscribers in new rules for cable and telecom operators that also own TV networks.

The regulator said yesterday that any program broadcast on television, including hockey games and other live events, must be made available to competitors under fair and reasonable terms.

However, the CRTC will allow companies to offer exclusive programming to their Internet or mobile customers if it is produced specifically for the Internet or a mobile device.

"Canadians shouldn't be forced to buy a mobile device ... simply to access their favourite television programs."
KONRAD VON FINCKENSTEIN, CRTC CHAIRMAN

This includes supplementary programming such as behind-the-scenes clips of a television program, as well as original content.

The new framework also adopted a code of conduct to prevent anti-competitive behaviour and ensure all distributors, broadcasters and online programming services negotiate in good faith as well as measures to protect independent distributors and broadcasters.

LISTEN, YOU DON'T WANT TO UPSET THIS TEACHER

HE SAYS ...

JOHN MAZEROLLE
METRO

Hi, kids! I'm here to talk to your class about teachers because they're important people to ... HEY! SHUT UP AND LISTEN!

I'm not a teacher, so I can say that. So no talking, eyes front, iPhones on vibrate, safety on all weapons.

Teachers change your life, kids. They help burst the protective bubble that parents have been building around you in the hope that you would never discover drugs, Darwin or Megan Fox.

Yet some of you give teachers a hard time and ... hey! No cheering!

This is what I mean. Teachers enter the profession filled with idealism but leave the classroom cynical and dispirited — usually by lunch hour.

One in three Canadian teachers leaves the profession after five years. I said NO CHEERING! Most get jobs in more relaxing professions, such as bomb disarmament. "I snip the wires and can feel my self unwind," one former teacher said.

No one cares about teachers, kids — not even adults. A teacher can be in the news because a deranged student bit off his nose, and all the adults watching will think, "Wish I got summers off."

"The problem is teachers have been treating you as allies. Meanwhile, you ripped up the teacher-student contract, made it into spitballs, and fired them through the Empty Pen Casing of Disrespect."

Many teachers have cracked. Unfortunately for you, I have the solution. The problem is teachers have been treating you as allies.

Meanwhile, you ripped up the teacher-student contract, made it into spitballs, and fired them through the Empty Pen Casing of Disrespect.

Well, your reign of terror is over.

See, I remember which teachers got respect. It wasn't the nice ones who wanted to help. Those teachers crumbled like the Wagon Wheels in my packed lunch.

No, the teachers in control were the ones who had an aura of menace: Dr. Dunn, whose title stirred up dread; Mr. Comeau, whose possibly apocryphal history of teenage knife fights awed us all; and Mr. Smith, whose unblinking eyes said, "You cannot comprehend how little I think of you."

The thing is, none of these teachers did anything threatening. They barely raised their voices. But there was always the fear of ... well, we weren't sure, but we knew it would be a Bad Thing.

So get ready, students. I'll be sharing this secret with teachers and they'll be spreading rumours about themselves nationwide. Principal Peterson? He has a punishment called "The Belt Buckle of Death." Miss McIntyre? Out on parole. And don't get Mr. Banner angry. You won't like him if he's angry.

Teachers will regain control, and they'll be able to get back to what they do best: pushing you up a grade regardless of merit.

Now, class, let's open our books to Megan Fox ...

Worth Mentioning

U.S. REAL ESTATE. In America, it's starting to feel as if there are two housing markets. One for the rich and one for everyone else.

Consider foreclosure-ravaged Detroit. In the historic Green Acres district, a haven for hipsters, a pristine, three-bedroom brick Tudor recently sold for $6,000 US.

Yet just 25 kilometres away, in the posh suburban enclave of Birmingham, bidding wars are back. Multimillion-dollar mansions are selling quickly. Sales this August were up 21 per cent from the previous year.

In the luxury sector, the recession is a memory and sales and prices are rising. But everywhere else, the market is moving sideways or getting worse.

In the housing market inhabited by most Americans, prices have fallen 30 per cent or more since the peak in 2007. That's a steeper decline than during the Depression.

Almost a quarter of American homeowners owe more on their house than it's worth. Another quarter have less than 20 per cent equity.

Windsor-area band The Tea Party may be feeling the temptation to sell the rights to their domain name to the U.S. political movement, according to the CBC.

A Bloomberg Businessweek report says the band's domain name, teaparty.com, could sell for as much as $1 million US.

The band, which split up in 2005, tells Businessweek they are considering auctioning off the domain name, or at least renting it out even though they aren't fans of the political Tea Party movement.

Famous near life-size puppet takes Toronto by storm Tickets go on sale next week

IAN GORMELY
METRO TORONTO

Torontonians are used to seeing stars in town promoting their latest project.

But it's not very often said star can be packed away into a box and shipped as cargo.

But then, Joey, the titular equestrian in War Horse, is no ordinary star.

A puppet, Joey is the culmination of 30 years of work from the Handspring Puppet Company.

Founded by Basil Jones and Adrian Kohler in 1971, the company quietly built a reputation in their native South Africa until the opportunity to adapt Michael Morpurgo's children's novel for the National Theatre of Great Britain came along (Steven Spielberg's version hits the big screen in December).

"Adrian's father was a cabinet and yacht maker and his mother was a puppeteer," explains Jones.

"When we met at art school in 1971, puppets were all he could think of."

Both were on hand this Monday as Joey made his premiere in Hogtown to explain how the construction of this two-thirds life-size puppet.

It takes three people to operate: one remains next to the puppet controlling head and facial movements while another two carry him (and anyone who happens to be riding him) on their shoulders while manning his legs.

All three have to move in unison as Joey moves from a short trot to a brisk gallop.

The horse is covered in mesh to allow the actors to see where they're going.

But what was most impressive was the level of detail they'd built into Joey, giving the actors control over his ears, tail and even his breathing, each of which they call important emotional indicators.

"The small movements that a puppet does are very important" explains Kohler.

"One of the things that we like to think of is people in the audience nudging the person next to them saying, 'Did you see that?' The movement is subtle enough for you to think that other people might not have seen it."

War Horse starts Feb. 2012. Tickets go on sale Monday, Sept. 26.

Double the pleasure

Sarah Michelle Gellar plays twins in new show Ringer

AMBER RAY
SCENE@METRONEWS.CA

Fans of Sarah Michelle Gellar have double the reason to tune in to her new drama, Ringer.

In this relationship-driven thriller, the former Buffy the Vampire Slayer star plays identical twins — Bridget, a former addict who is on the run after witnessing a murder, and Siobhan, a New York City socialite with a seemingly perfect life.

When Siobhan goes missing after the estranged sisters had just begun to reconcile, Bridget assumes her twin's identity, only to learn Siobhan was hiding more than a few dark secrets of her own. That essentially means Gellar is playing three characters in the series — Bridget, Siobhan, and Bridget-pretending-to-be-Siobhan.

HANDOUT

▶ Sarah Michelle Gellar

She's got a clear favourite: "Whoever has the best wardrobe at the time," Gellar jokes.

Of course, it's a little more complex than Gucci versus Gap. Gellar relates playing the sisters to parenting children since "you have to love each one individually and understand (the one you're playing at the time)," she explains. "So when I'm Bridget, I feel that all of Bridget's motivations are hers and Siobhan is wrong. And when I'm Siobhan, everything Bridget does is wrong. I try to get into the head of each of them."

Acting-wise, it's not a new challenge for the 34-year-old, who played multiple characters in Buffy using the "old-school split screen" method.

Tune in: Ringer airs Fridays on Global.

But technology has come a long way since that supernatural series went off the air in 2003.

"There's so much more that's available now between face replacement and the stop motion cameras," Gellar enthuses. "So during the pilot, we played with all of them like kids with new toys to figure out what works best."

Proving herself

Bello has nothing but love for her new show, Prime Suspect

AMBER RAY
SCENE@METRONEWS.CA

Make no mistake — Global's Prime Suspect is not a remake of the classic British crime thriller starring Helen Mirren.

Aside from title, what it borrows from its overseas counterpart is a strong, yet flawed, central character determined to prove she's a damn good homicide detective, no matter what the men in her squad think of her.

On the eve of the big premiere, we caught up with star Maria Bello, who plays Detective Jane Timoney with an absorbing wit and attitude.

Does the title Prime Suspect help create buzz or draw criticism from fans of the British series?
You know, we've been so lucky in a way. People have recognized immediately that it's a way different show. So then the comparisons stop.

Did you have any apprehensions stepping into this role?
Before I took the job, I said no to it. I was scared of being put in some sort of a box and not being able to be collaborative or creative, which often happens in TV. I didn't want to not see my son; my friends who work on these kinds of shows sometimes work 14 or 5 hours a day.

I met the producers — Pete Berg, Sarah Aubrey, Alex Cunningham, they're so brilliant — and they said to me, "It won't be like that. We trust you to create this character how you see this character and collaborate with us. And you'll never work more than 12 hours a day and you will have a life."

And they've lived up to their promises and it's just the most extraordinary job I've had.

Can you talk about making Jane Timoney your own character? Details like her scarves and the hat and smoking — how much input did you have in those little things that are so much a part of her?
The brilliant Amy Stofsky, the costume designer, she and I had the exact same idea for the clothing, which is an updated Katharine Hepburn. You know, that kind of male-female look that she's really feminine, but at the same time wears these kind of sexy men's clothes. And I went in that direction and at first the (producers) were like, "Well, uh, I don't know." But I really fought for it and said, "Listen, she has her own style. I know great policewomen, as well as men, who have great style."

Good morning Angels ... again

New Charlie's Angels series heads to Miami with reboot focused on more action

Miami is the new city of angels — at least the city of Charlie's Angels.

ABC is jumping into the reboot game this fall with an updated version of the classic series that kicks off the network's Thursday night prime-time lineup. Moving its setting and production from Los Angeles to South Florida, the new show gets a fresh start in a new city.

The remake tries to distance itself from the camp of the 1970s version, striving to be a more grounded action series. The first episode begins with two Angels — a former thief played by Rachael Taylor and a disgraced police officer played by Annie Ilonzeh — seeing the third member of their team killed during a mission.

Their boss Charlie Townsend and his assistant Bosley — played by Ramon Rodriguez — persuade the survivors to recruit a new Angel, a street racer played by Minka Kelly.

With Drew Barrymore — an Angel in the 2000 and 2003 films — serving as an executive producer, the show was developed by Al Gough and Miles Millar, the duo behind the hit WB show Smallville, which followed the exploits of a young, pre-Superman Clark Kent. ABC had been planning to bring back Charlie's Angels for several years when Gough and Millar got involved last spring.

They acknowledge that fans have certain expectations and will scream if they aren't met. The original Charlie's Angels was a cultural phenomenon when it debuted in 1976, making stars of Farrah Fawcett, Kate Jackson and Jaclyn Smith. Fawcett proved particularly popular, with boys posting her iconic poster in their rooms and girls copying her feathered hair.

35

The first episode of the new Charlie's Angels is scheduled to air at 7 p.m. ET Thursday on CTV, the 35th anniversary of the original's premiere.

"When you say you're going to reboot Charlie's Angels, you certainly are just hanging a big target on your back," Gough said. "What you want to do ideally is reconnect with an audience that loved the show when they were younger and also bring new fans to it."

But the new show starts fresh: These Angels aren't saints. In the original, the women had all trained to become L.A. police officers but sexism in the department had left them relegated to menial positions, so Charlie recruited them to be real detectives. In the new series, the Angels all have sketchy pasts. Charlie recruits them to give them a second chance, using the skills they developed as criminals to do good.

"They're sort of Angels with dirty faces," Gough said.

Taylor said she and her co-stars are looking forward to putting a modern twist on the mythology.

"Even though they were extremely cool and successful, we just want to do our own version," Taylor said. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

From the trailer park to Afghanistan

Director Mike Clattenberg talks about moving from the Trailer Park Boys to more serious fare Afghan Luke story of a reporter's attempt to gather the truth in Afghanistan

RICHARD CROUSE
SCENE@METRONEWS.CA

So many movies are being made in Halifax these days the city is informally nicknamed Haliwood.

Hollywood fare like Titanic and Dolores Claiborne have frequently used the city as a backdrop but lately Canadian filmmakers have taken back the streets from their Hollywood counterparts.

Thom Fitzgerald's new film Cloudburst recently filmed there, Hobo with a Shotgun cast a lurid light on its streets and Charlie Zone is a thriller set against the city's soft underbelly.

"There's a lot going on in the city," says native Nova Scotian Mike Clattenberg.

He should know. As the director of The Trailer Park Boys he made seven seasons of the show and two spinoff movies in "the Fax."

His new film, Afghan Luke, starring Terminator 3: Rise of the Machines star Nick Stahl, was conceived in Halifax, but set in a place where "everything is true but the facts."

A gonzo look at one reporter's efforts to report on the truth of what is happening in Afghanistan, it's a departure from the work the director is best known for.

"I loved the 10 years we did Trailer Park Boys," says Clattenberg.

"There was insane drunk lunacy; blowing up cars.

"All that stuff was really fun but it was really nice doing something entirely different, 80 per cent drama, 20 per cent insanity, whereas Trailer Park was the other way around," he says.

While interiors and post production were done in Halifax, Clattenberg had to look further afield for exteriors.

"The first gigantic challenge was to shoot a film that is 90 per cent exteriors, set in Afghanistan, in Canada during the rainy season," says Clattenberg.

"We eventually found Ashcroft and Cache Creek, British Columbia, about five hours from Vancouver."

The setting mimicked Afghanistan's rugged, mountainous terrain so much the film's technical advisor Wafi Gran gave it the thumbs up.

"He said the next time he pines for Afghanistan he's just going to go there and hang out.

"He really thought that it looked like his home town,"

In one respect, however, the location was almost too authentic.

"I didn't expect dust storms, but we had them," Clattenberg says.

"It really worked for the film, but the most dangerous thing for our gear is sand.

"The guys had to work three and four hours after wrap every night cleaning the equipment because when the sand came up, we were like, 'Let's go. We have to shoot!'"

"(In the Trailer Park Boys) there was insane drunk lunacy; blowing up cars. All that stuff was really fun, but it was nice doing something entirely different."

Harry Connick Jr.: The dolphin whisperer

Actor says he formed close bond with a very special marine mammal

RICHARD CROUSE
SCENE@METRONEWS.CA

Harry Connick Jr. says working with his co-star everyday was "really incredible." He's not talking about Morgan Freeman or Ashley Judd, although he enjoyed spending time on set with them. No, he's referring to Winter, the titular star of his new film Dolphin's Tale.

Winter is the real-life inspiration of the story of a bottlenose dolphin whose tail was lost in a crab trap. Rescued and rehabilitated by the folks at the Clearwater Marine Aquarium, the giant marine mammal was equipped with a prosthetic tail that allows it to swim normally.

"When you really got to spend time with her you got the sense that she was aware of your feelings more than your presence," he says.

"There were times when I had to apply the prosthetic to her, when you thought she could wipe me out with her tail if she wanted to but she was very calm. It was strange, like an otherworldly type of communication.

"I've been around dolphins before but there is something different about her. I guess it's because she's been so ultra socialized, she's been around so many different people since she was months old that maybe there is a different type of relationship she has with humans. I'm not sure. There is something you can feel. It's pretty cool."

"When we got her she was about 60 pounds and about two-and-a-half or three feet long," says David Yates, CEO and director of the Clearwater Marine Aquarium. "Very, very small. A dolphin that small, with that kind of trauma, is not expected to live at all."

But Winter defied expectations and is now an inspiration for visitors to the aquarium, and starting this weekend, to movie audiences.

"I know exactly how the movie is going to impact people because we see it every day around here in real life," says Yates.

"Winter is a young dolphin who lost her tale and wouldn't give up, simply wouldn't quit. People look at her, especially kids and they realize she is different, and what kid doesn't think they are different?

"But they look at Winter and go, 'You know, she's different and she's OK. I'm different; I'm going to be OK.' That's the essence of the movie."

Brad Pitt and Jennifer Aniston during happier times.

Jennifer Aniston wasn't pleased with ex-husband Brad Pitt's comments to Parade magazine about their marriage last week, according to Us Weekly.

"She was annoyed. She thought it was rude and inappropriate," a source says.

But her team of handlers and publicists "went ballistic" — and haven't been satisfied with Pitt's mea culpa after the fact, according to another source.

"No one believes his words were taken out of context. He said what he said," the source says.

"We think he's jealous she's in love."

It isn't just her upcoming talk show on Oprah Winfrey's network that has Rosie O'Donnell smiling.

The outspoken host also reportedly has a new lady in her life, according to People magazine. O'Donnell stepped out recently with new girlfriend Michelle Rounds, walking the red carpet with her at the annual Rosie Theater Kids Gala in New York City.

"They met at a Starbucks a few months ago," a source says. "They are adorable together and are very, very happy."

BEST TAKE ON SPORTY: NICOLE FARHI

Spring's biggest trend has looked a bit young and junior at some shows. But Farhi made it look clean, polished and cool for 9-to-5ers who can't necessarily get away with wearing see-through mesh jerseys and patchwork leggings in the office. Her clean, crisp, minimalist shorts, blouses and dresses in white- and lemon-coloured cotton made a strong case for simplicity.

GETTY IMAGES

BEST PARTY ATMOSPHERE: TOPSHOP UNIQUE

Philip Green's high street extravaganza feels like a hotter and hotter ticket with each season. A pre-show cocktail hour filled with snacks, bubbly and famous faces (Anna Wintour, Naomi Campbell and Kelis) set the stage for what ended up feeling like one big party. The clothes were a clever mix of urban street wear and opulent Egyptian references.

CATWALKING.COM

NEW NAME TO KNOW: J.W. ANDERSON

The Brit has only been designing women's wear for a little over a year, but is already on the tongues of nearly every major editor. The biggest selling point: Unusually constructed clothing that boasts rarefied craftsmanship, at affordable prices. Keep an eye out for his patchworked leather, mesh and cotton jackets and trousers.

GETTY IMAGES

BIGGEST CROWD PLEASER: CHRISTOPHER KANE

He showed a subversive take on those lady-like, A-line brocade dresses that dominated the '60s by slicing them and inserting sheer panels, tricking them out with crystal embroidery and plastering them with plastic flowers (kind of like your grandmother's old shower curtains.) They were expertly constructed and looked unlike anything else shown in the past two weeks.

MOST SURPRISING: BURBERRY

It was a bit of a shock to see models walk down Burberry Prorsum's runway in wild wax prints and traditional African shapes. This is Burberry, after all, a brand that waves its old English heritage around like the friend you have who never misses a chance to remind you that she's a descendant of [insert name of old, titled, moneyed family here.] That said, the new look breathed some life into the house's repertoire.

’70s silhouettes and ’60s preppy highlight fall style trends

STEPHANIE ORFORD
FOR METRO

Don’t let the Indian summer fool you, fall is just around the corner and it’s time to dress the part. Frankly, with these trends afoot we can’t wait for the leaves to start falling.

Karen Richter, Showroom Manager for H&M Canada, shared her top fall/winter trends for 2011.

The ’70s

Womanly silhouettes define the ’70s fashion revival this season, like skirts and dresses that hit below the knee.

Wide-legged dress pants can be paired with a blouse that ties in a large, floppy bow at the collar. Go for a relaxed tailored look with a trench coat worn over flared dress pants or jeans. Key colours are camel, cognac and orange.

The ’60s

This look is more preppy and girlish with short and straight silhouettes. The A-line shift dress is a key piece, and is best worn with a high-heeled loafer and classic accessories like a multitude of jangling metal bangles. Important colours are beige and navy with bright pink, mustard or orange accents.

Glam

Think rich colours and textures. Expect dramatic black and jewel tones — like crimson, emerald, cobalt — in sumptuous fabrics like satin, velvet and silk fringe.

Wear this look now in black and deep red nail colours. The trend will become more visible in clothing as the holiday season approaches.

Important pieces for women include the men’s style tuxedo and the kimono jacket.

Flower power

The floral prints that have sprouted up in seasons past show no signs of withering. Warm up the fall chill with vibrant flower print shirts, pants, dresses, or shoes.

Layering

This trend is perfect for cold Canadian winters. It’s all about volume — piling on layers and layers of knits. A tunic worn over loose trousers, or a chunky knit sweater dress over wool leggings is great for keeping warm this season, especially when topped with a coat, boots and a shearling hat.

Footwear

- The chunky heel — It’s back for fall in pumps with or without a platform, booties and knee-high boots (to wear under those long ’70s skirts).
- Western influence — Look for boots in rich brown leathers and suedes that seem like they might belong in a stirrup. Try softening the look with a floral dress.
- Curved heel — These quirky shoes can help make an otherwise conservative outfit a little more playful.
- Conspicuous socks — Keep your tootsies warm and beguile onlookers by wearing solid or patterned socks with your high heels. Best worn scrunched down near the ankle.

Faux fur

It’s a big trend this season. H&M will be selling a wide range of faux fur garments and accessories including jackets, vests, faux fur trimmed sweaters, coats, and even bags and boots. Off the runway, the trend is best worn in small doses.

Take a flyer with an aviator jacket

It’s September, so that — sadly — means it’s time to pack those sandals and cargo shorts away to clean up and suit up for fall. But what’s hot for this cool season when it comes to menswear? Here are some ideas to get you started.

You can warm things up with your colours — think beige, camel, tobacco, navy, khaki and grey. “Black, white and light blue for classic suits and party looks also work,” notes Karen Richter, the Toronto-based showroom manager for H&M Canada. “And bright orange is the accent colour of the season.”

Looking for a new sweater? Think texture when shopping around, says Tara Wickwire, The Gap’s Toronto-based public relations director — as in marled cardigans, fine gauge merino striped V-necks and contrast knit sweater jackets. “The cardigan continues to be popular with men — and such an essential layering piece over dress shirts and T-shirts,” says Wickwire.

And as the wind chills down, another look to heat up with is a leather outer jacket.

Leather not for you? Don’t rule out pea coats in wool or wool/cashmere blends. “You can pair them with cashmere toques and colourful knit scarves in stripes, checks and fairaile patterns,” says Shannon Stewart, Harry Rosen’s Toronto-based merchandise manager for sportswear. Other popular outer covering choices include trench coats, narrow cut blazers and military-style coats. ASTRID VAN DEN BROEK

For Jay it's all about the Attitude

You've seen the ads, you've heard the hype and now it's here Jay Manuel dishes on the launch of his debut line

ELIZABETH BEDDALL
LIFE@METRONEWS.CA

TROY WOOD

Jay Manuel, creative director of Attitude Jay Manuel

Last time we spoke with you, you were just about to show your first Attitude Jay Manuel collection and the public hadn't seen it yet. Now that it's arrived in Sears stores and the billboards are everywhere, how are you feeling?
To see it all here and realize that we're past the runway show and it's on the floor and seeing the excitement... it's really been a kind of like a weird dream to be honest. And now that we're in a normal work flow and have been moving into spring/summer — the show is in three weeks — we realize we've all learned so much from this experience.

What kind of feedback have you received from customers?
It's been very positive. What I love to hear and the best compliment I can get is when someone tweets me and says, 'I wear a size 14 and I went in and found a suit that fit me'. That makes me feel good because when working with the pattern drafters I was literally pinning and chalking and working on those pieces to make sure they fit well.

If I came upon the Attitude collection in Sears and a Jay Manuel angel appeared on my shoulder what would he whisper in my ear to guide me in my experience.
One of the things that I would say is that fashion should never be intimidating. It's there to service you. And secondly, if I could guide you somewhere in particular I would say that the most universally flattering silhouette is the wide-legged trouser. If you haven't tried one on before, reach out and try one because you'd be so surprised how it fits.

You've held so many titles in the fashion industry. How does creative director rank in comparison?
To me I would say this right now is the top because I'm so involved in every part of the process. I'm literally working every day on this brand. So for me I take a lot of pride in the work that we do and I'm also my harshest critic. So I'm constantly evaluating it.

Can you give us an idea of what the next collection will look like?
My initial inspiration was that I wanted to take the customer on a journey... that's what I'm going to say for now...we're going on a journey.

HOW A BACON SANDWICH MAY CHANGE YOUR LIFE

ROOFTOP SURFING

STEPHEN DUPUIS
HOME
@METRONEWS.CA

I came across the catchy title of this column on the Greenbuild conference website, courtesy of Ashley Katz, manager of communications at the U.S. Green Building Council.

Greenbuild is the annual conference of the USGBC, the organization behind the LEED (Leadership in Energy and Environmental Design) labelling program for residential and non-residential buildings.

This year, for the first-time ever, the Greenbuild Conference is being held outside the U.S.

From Oct. 4-7, Toronto's hotels, restaurants, bars and coffee shops will be even busier than they were during TIFF, albeit serving a slightly different crowd, as up to 25,000 green builders, designers, suppliers, consultants and government officials from all over the world descend upon Toronto for Greenbuild.

As Katz puts it, "Greenbuild is packed with opportunities to experience the architectural, political and financial capital of Canada (I'll have to tell her about Ottawa), while learning about its long legacy of green building leadership and innovation."

Katz encourages delegates to "take a tour inside the inner workings of Toronto's greenest buildings. Tour a green art gallery, green roof, or a green office. Indulge in the areas best restaurants and cafes (peameal bacon sandwich anyone?)"

It's entirely apropos that Greenbuild would come here given our leading-edge Ontario Building Code and Green Energy Act, not to mention the Canadian home building industry's enviable track record as world leaders in energy-efficient construction.

On that note, BILD is proud to be working with the Canada Green Building Council to host a welcome party at the Steam Whistle Brewery, which will be known as Canada House for the duration of the conference.

Note to self, make sure there's a peameal bacon hors d'oeuvre.

STEPHEN DUPUIS IS PRESIDENT AND CEO OF THE BUILDING INDUSTRY AND LAND DEVELOPMENT ASSOCIATION (BILD) AND CAN BE FOUND ON TWITTER (TWITTER.COM/BILDGTA), FACEBOOK (FACEBOOK.COM/BILDGTA), AND BILD'S OFFICIAL ONLINE BLOG (BILDBLOGS.CA).

The prefab stone age

Toronto's condominiums go back to the future with precast concrete

The material stands up longer to exposure to the elements and also has environmental benefits

DUNCAN MCALLISTER
@METRONEWS.CA

In days of old, Toronto condominiums were almost entirely constructed with precast concrete exteriors.

These buildings had a stately look to them, almost like the sandstone structures of a bygone era.

More recently, most condos have either a glass wall construction or are surrounded by glass balconies.

We're beginning to see a return to the precast trend, and in addition to aesthetic qualities, there are other benefits as well.

Precast stands up longer to exposure to the elements, as it is less porous than brick or stone and requires less exterior maintenance.

There's also an environmental advantage. It acts as a layer of insulation and for building owners, that can add up to savings on heating and cooling.

Most Torontonians are well aware of the recent spate of incidents involving glass panels falling from condominium towers.

Precast offers a welcome safety factor. The fact that the windows are set into the exterior walls means that glass panels are unlikely to drop out.

Governor General Award winning architect, Stephen Teeple, designer of OpArt lofts in Oakville, talks to Metro about the use of precast concrete.

What was your rationale to go with precast exteriors with OpArt?

We're looking to do something kind of fun and a little bit more artistic and so we had imagined a kind of randomly perforated solid as an artistic representation of the building and the precast was a really good way to achieve that.

We want to do some special finishing on the precast to make sure that it's very crisp and bright and not the same old look, so we're actually going to stain it bright white.

What advantages can be realized with the use of precast?

We can get a greater level of insulation, better proportion of window to wall and windows that don't fall out of the buildings.

I live in a condo and have an all glass facing bedroom and it seems fairly bizarre sometimes.

So precast is good for insulation?

We can get a good amount of insulation behind all of the precast, which is always better than glass. Even though glass has improved in its performance over the years, it'll still never be as good as a solid surface. But it's the artistic expression that was the true genesis.

Are there other condo developments using precast?

In downtown Toronto there's some very nice ones that use a mix of window wall and precast, there's a number of them around.

It's a fairly efficient material as well, in terms of construction timing and so on, so it has a lot of advantages.

You do see it on other buildings, there's a sort of more standard of language of it I would say, and this is using the same technology to achieve a different look and feel.

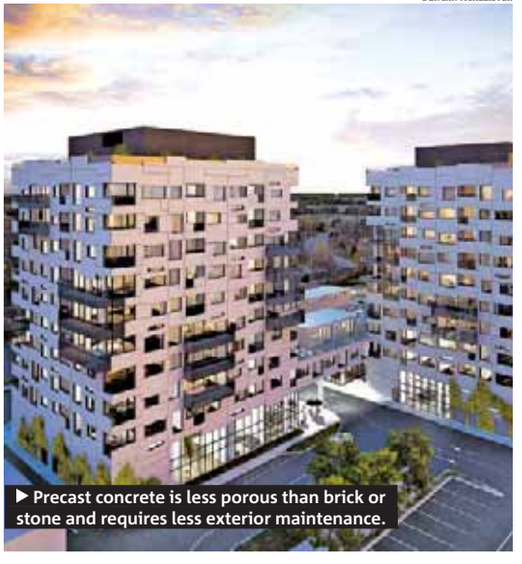
DUNCAN MCALLISTER

▶ The Bloor Street Neighbourhood condos by Cresford Developments near Yonge and Bloor makes intricate use of precast concrete exteriors.

DUNCAN MCALLISTER

▶ The material can offer a clean and classic look.

DUNCAN MCALLISTER



▶ Precast concrete is less porous than brick or stone and requires less exterior maintenance.

Advantages

Precast concrete is very versatile, as it can be moulded and cast into various shapes.

It gives the designer flexibility in terms of ornate structures and can be surfaced in different ways.

CHILDREN AND JOINT HOME OWNERSHIP

LEGAL MATTERS

JEFFREY COWAN
HOME
@METRONEWS.CA

A. I am getting older and thinking of my kids and their inheritance. My house is my most valuable asset and it was mentioned to me by a friend that to avoid estate taxes on the value of my home when I pass away, I can transfer the ownership to my children and myself. Is this a good suggestion?

A: There is no problem doing the actual transfer to one or more of your children and yourself, which when held jointly, allows for a 'right of survivorship' thereby transferring your ownership to the remaining owners when you die without becoming an estate asset.

This of course means there is no estate tax payable on the value of the house. However, there are some concerns that you need to consider before you take this step.

1. If you place one or more of your children on the title to your house and they have their own home, the increase in the value of the property from when they were transferred onto title to the date of your death is taxable on their portion under capital gains tax (it is not their primary residence). If you plan on living a good long time from now, this could lead to some serious tax consequences for your kids when you die.

2. If there is any outstanding mortgage or line of credit on your home, you must pay Land Transfer Tax on the portion attributable to your child's ownership.

3. If you are transferring the house to just one of your children, you should specifically state in your Will that the home should be sold and the value of the transaction be split between your children, otherwise, the owner/child may be tempted to claim it as their own and cause huge strife amongst your beneficiaries.

Indeed, transferring the title to your kids and you is a form of estate planning that can be effective in reducing the estate tax burden but it should be entered into with care and proper tax/legal advice. JEFFREY COWAN IS THE PRINCIPAL OF COWAN LAW AND CAN BE REACHED BY EMAIL AT JEFF@COWANLAW.CA.

From a rented space to a place to call home

THINKSTOCK.COM

▶ A good bed and headboard can give "a sense of permanence."

Living in a rented apartment can feel like a floating liaison
But that doesn't mean you can't have some fun — well, for a short time at least

RICHARD PECKETT
LIFE@METRONEWS.CA
METRO WORLD NEWS LOS ANGELES

We've all lived in those dreadfully poky, rented city apartments that have the personality of a monastic cell.

But rather than seeing renting a flat as a state of limbo between homeleaver and homeowner, we should embrace the space and make it our own (but do see tenancy agreement for dos and don'ts).

Thankfully, Kishani Perera is an LA-based interior designer whiz to the stars (including funny man Ben Stiller and cult favourite Gary Oldman).

Here are her tips to help perk up your pad.

Give it some personality

"You've got to commit to making it your own — it's not just a transient space. Paint it. Give it some warmth with a soft colour wash of blue, grey or even taupe just to get rid of that hotel feel," instructs Perera. "Remember, the floor is a canvas too. Dress it with a patterned or textured rug," she adds.

Bed down

"Buy a good bed and headboard — it gives your bedroom a sense of permanence. A futon or a floating mattress won't do," our expert says. You don't live in a crack den so, "It's worth it, if only for a short time and you can always reupholster or add throw cushions to give it a new look."

All good things come in small packages

"People tend to buy tiny pieces of furniture for tiny spaces, which actually makes it look smaller," Perera explains.

Create an optical illusion in any space by, "playing with the scale by utilizing the height. Tall bookcases and large mirrors draw the eye up and away from the cramped floor space. Contrary to popular belief, painting dark colours creates the illusion of a larger space."

"People tend to buy tiny furniture for tiny spaces, which actually makes it look smaller."
INTERIOR DESIGNER KISHANI PERERA

Go wild with whimsy

Your home is not a hospital ward, so do try to avoid stark sterility with something similar to Perera's curveball solution. "It's nice to have one crazy element of whimsy. Maybe an antique disco ball. Just something that gives it a kooky, personal touch."

Save the pennies

"Window drapes are not worth the splurge. They rarely work in the next property. Cheap solutions such as white sheer drapes from IKEA are inexpensive and give a room some added texture and feeling."

You can be a Scrooge elsewhere too. "Coffee tables can be bought cheaply and change the whole ambience of a room. One year you could have a lacquered red one — the next a Moroccan style," the expert muses.

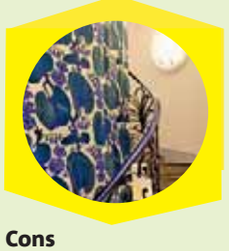
Keep walls sacred

"Use a decal wallpaper, which are easy to take down and nowadays they don't look too juvenile."

Yes, papering a rented pad does read a little drastic, so here's one for the less nasty types among you: "I'm big on placing knick-knacks or candles in groupings around the room — they're interesting, fuss-free and you'll save on major revamping," shares our interior supremo.

Focus Walls

Pros
- Adds drama to a small recess or niche.
- Wallpapers can be pricey but not if you go all frugal and stick to just one wall.
- It's an easy way to express your flair without going off-the-wall!



Cons
- You may be in danger of scaring people with your split personality.
- It's popular with provincial hair salons — enough said.
- You're only creating a dilemma for yourself in the decorating department

Go for green cleaning products

Congrats — you scrubbed the toilet because your in-laws are stopping by
But the cleaner you used may be bad for you — and for the environment

Cleaning the bathroom can be daunting, even if you're armed with traditional cleaners laden with bleach and strong but perhaps environmentally unfriendly ingredients. But what if you want to go green and still get the toilet bowl, sink and tile to sparkle?

Start by stocking up on white vinegar and baking soda.

These two staples of the kitchen can help keep your bathroom clean in a way that's safe for the environment.

A little bit of chemistry helps explain why. "Vinegar, because of its acidity, can be good for (cleaning) hard water and soap scum," said Rebecca Sutton, a senior scientist with the Environmental Working Group, a public interest group devoted to protecting health and the environment.

Baking soda, on the other hand, is alkaline, said Annie B. Bond, author of books on green living, including Home Enlightenment. Mix the baking soda with some water and make a paste, and it can be used as a scrub.

And don't forget the soap — a mild castile soap made from olive or vegetable oils.

Some solutions for typical bathroom trouble spots:

THE BATHTUB

Vinegar will help get rid of the soap scum. If you need to scour, try a paste of baking soda and water.

THE SINK

You can brighten the sink and "get the white back" by pouring in vinegar and leaving it there for a while, Bond said. Also, try the soft scrub made from baking soda and water. "It's not a matter of elbow grease. It's a matter of letting it set for a period of time," she said.

THE DRAIN

"To de-grease and sweeten sink and tub drains, pour 1/2 cup (125 ml) of baking soda down drain followed by 1 cup (250 ml) vinegar; let bubble for 15 minutes; rinse with hot water," Consumer Reports' Greener Choices website says.

"You might have to repeat the procedure more than once or leave the baking soda and vinegar to 'cook' overnight."

THE TOILET

"The toilet bowl is difficult, even under the best of circumstances," Bond said. "Go to a health food store and get a really good bathroom toilet product."

For those who want to try a homemade product, Consumer Reports suggests pouring a cup (250 ml) of borax into the toilet and letting it set overnight.

"In the morning, scrub and flush," it said. "For an extra-strength cleaner, add 1/4 cup (50 ml) vinegar to the borax."

THE FLOOR

Clean with diluted vinegar and then do a water rinse afterward, Sutton said.

▶ Wendy Brooks cleans her windows with white vinegar and newspapers at her home in Phoenix. Brooks uses mostly Borax and vinegar for her household cleaning.

'Greenwashing'

- Sutton cautions consumers to be alert for "greenwashing," in which a company promotes the one green aspect of the product but doesn't give the full picture of other ingredients.
- Go for products that are biodegradable and solvent-free, have a bio base, and are low in volatile organic compounds.

KEEPING YOUR DOG'S PAW PRINTS IN THE PARK

CHARLES THE BUTLER

ASKCHARLESTHEBUTLER@METRONEWS.CA

FOR MORE, VISIT CHARLESMACPHERSON.COM

Hello Mr. Butler,
Our busy lives include both young children and a medium-sized dog that we love!

Often after a walk through the park the dog's paws and legs are wet and or have some mud on them.

Do you have some cleanup tips, so that Jerry (our dog) does not get the carpets, and in some cases the furniture, soiled?
Thank you!
Dog Lover

Dear Dog Lover,
I know exactly what you are faced with, as I used to take care of my employers' two dogs (the fabulous Ms. Gigi and the wonderful Ms. Beauty!)

This is what I did: I went to the dollar store, and bought two dozen really cheap matching face cloths and two small wicker baskets.

I then left these near my side door, under the bench, where I would sit to tie my shoes.

Every time I would walk the dogs, I trained them to sit as soon as we got inside the house and I would then use the clean, dry cloths to wipe their feet.

I would then place the used cloths in the second basket.

On laundry day, the dirty cloths would be washed with all of my household cleaning rags, and replaced.

Heirloom linens back en vogue

- Craftsmanship and uniqueness of fine old linens is drawing decorators who like to mix old and new
- Place a vintage quilt on a modern slab bed or dress an antique lace tablecloth with chic tableware

Contemporary home decor is yielding a little this season to a more traditional style evocative of the Edwardian and Victorian eras.

We're seeing steamer trunks used as tables, Victorian illustrative prints and wallpapers, and new versions of period furniture.

If you're interested in experimenting with this look without going all in, consider vintage linens.

Once considered an important part of a woman's personal belongings, vintage cotton and damask napery, bed and bath linens are often wonderful examples of the loom and needle arts.

Textile weaving, lace tatting and embroidery could take craftspeople hundreds of hours; the resulting pieces were treasured, loved and passed along through families.

"A woman would have her personal and household linens embroidered with her initials because they were part of her personal wealth, and went with her when she married."

J. BOULAY/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

▶ A hand-embroidered pillowcase done by the Mazzarone workshop in Venice as featured in The Book of Fine Linen.

And sooner or later, some are given up to the marketplace, for new owners to enjoy.

Kate Middleton's dress

English-born Anna Redgrave of Annapolis Royal, N.S., owns Highland Lace, a vintage linens web shop.

Her lifelong passion for antique textiles was nurtured by her grandmother, a member of the Royal Needlework Society and a seamstress at Buckingham Palace.

"She was responsible for finding and sewing all the embellishments on the ball gowns," says Redgrave. The Society was the same group that, 60 years later, made the overlay of lace on Kate Middleton's dress.

Redgrave sells lace curtains, embroidered linen napkins, cutwork cotton cloths and a variety of items crafted of repurposed linens, from the turn of the century through the 1950s.

Where and what to look for

There's a large vintage-linen fan base, Redgrave says, and French monogrammed pieces, linen napkins and vintage lace hankies sell out fast.

"Monogrammed pieces were usually handed down, so they're highly valued," Redgrave says.

Jane Nicholson (mrsnicholson.com) is a designer and decorator also based in Annapolis Royal. She looks for linens with a nice weave. "If you're buying '40s and '50s tablecloths, look for good workmanship and strong colour."

Flea markets, tag sales, estate auctions, thrift shops and vintage stores are all good sources, but try to glean the provenance of your find. To whom did the piece belong? Was it part of a trousseau? "Information like that makes the piece come alive," says Nicholson.

If you find a linen item you like but it's not in the best of shape, don't pass it by.

- Torn seams and holes can be darned; a stain can be hidden with a clever fold; a large piece can be cut and the salvaged remnant made into a pillow or mounted under glass.
- Use vintage lace-edged sheets as curtains, bedspreads, even room dividers.
- Put embroidered hand towels in powder rooms. They serve well as wine glass towels, too. Have a tailor make them into little pillows or baby quilts if you don't sew yourself.

Art Deco style

The mix of modern and luxury collided between the two world wars

DESIGN CENTRE

KARL LOHNES
HOME@METRONEWS.CA

I love to buy interesting-looking furniture that has a story, history or is from an era back in time.

Although I like older things I tend to veer toward modern lines, which can be hard to find when you love vintage and antique furnishings.

Enter my new best friend: the Art Deco era.

The furniture was simple in design and glamourous to look at. Exotic woods, shagreen, ebony and ivory were just a few of the exotic elements that made Art Deco furnishings so special.

Clean lines, unfussy style and patterns make for an easy to live with aesthetic for anyone who wants a bit of history and a modern look in their space.

▶ Ralph Lauren uses many Art Deco elements.

▶ Barbara Barry Side Table, $3,100, Baker Furniture

Starburst Mirror, $190, Sears

ALL PHOTOS CONTRIBUTED

▶ Grayson Chair, $840, Crate and Barrel.

Elite Floor Grates, $18, Home Depot

Get the look:

- Art Deco is a minimalist, uncluttered look.
- Use streamlined furniture, geometric patterns and sweeping curves.
- Decorate with rich red, black or any dark lacquered wood, table trays and serving platters.
- Upholster furniture in solid colour fabric, or use geometric patterned fabrics for cushions or chairs.
- Animal printed carpets and accessories are a perfect choice.
- Use curvaceous accessories like vases and sculptures to break up all the clean, straight lines.
- Inject a stylized sunburst shape — nowadays often as a decorative mirror.

Classic simplicity

Characteristics of the Art Deco style:

- Simple, clean lines
- Slight arched tops, light brass or gold accents
- Masculine colours like black, brown or grey
- Walnut brown wood stains, high-gloss finishes

A little history:

- Although Hollywood made the Art Deco look famous, the clean-lined luxurious era was invented in Paris.
- Art Deco has influenced fashion, interior design, architecture, industrial design and visual arts. It resurged in the 1980s with black lacquered furnishings.

Prepare your garden for winter

Stop pests from setting up in your veggie patch in the cooler months Now's the time to plant spring bulbs

DIY IDEAS

Once the cooler weather arrives there are many things that gardeners — both pro and amateur alike — should be doing to keep their landscapes healthy.

Follow these simple guidelines through the fall and your efforts will be rewarded in the spring, with a garden that looks better than ever thanks to the work you're doing now.

From simple upkeep to major overhauls, Renovation Realities airs on DIY Network Canada, proving that even in home improvement the truth is often stranger than fiction.

Follow these renos as budgets skyrocket and tempers flare — with a great reveal at the end.

Lawn care

Now is the time to start adding new seed to dead or bare patches on your lawn.

After spreading it, ensure you keep the new seeds moist by watering them daily until they germinate.

Do your best to keep falling leaves off the seeds, without disrupting them from the ground.

Vegetable gardens

At this time of year you must clean up your vegetable garden as the old plant debris that is found there becomes a home for pests and diseases in the cooler months.

So get it off the garden and into the compost pile.

There are still some crops that are great going into fall that will keep your vegetable garden active, including broccoli, kale, and squash.

Most of these fall crops actually taste better after a few light frosts, so be patient with them!

Landscaping

This is the absolute best time of year to plant trees and shrubs because it allows months for a healthy root system to develop without the foliage baking in the heat of summer.

Once planted, ensure your new plants are watered at least once a week.

Flower gardens

Plant your spring bulbs now, or store them in a cool, dry place.

ISTOCK

▶ A little landscaping now will reap beautiful rewards in the spring.

Start thinking about your spring colours and plant bulbs for tulips, daffodils, crocus, iris, and hyacinth.

You can also divide your perennials and plant perennial seeds for next spring.

DNA3 CONTINUES TO DELIVER

Top Floor Suites just Released at King West's Hottest New Condo

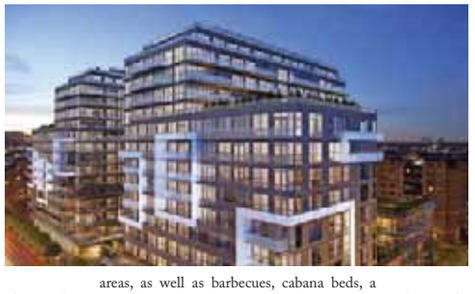
Summer may be winding to a close, but things keep getting hotter at DNA3, the third and final phase of Downtown's Next Address, King West's most in-demand condo project and fastest selling new launch.

Canderel Residential has just released a collection of new suites at DNA3, including the highly anticipated, luxurious sub-penthouse and penthouse units. This final release of suites caps a wildly successful launch year for a development that has been the talk of Toronto… and signifies buyers' last chance to become part of the pre-eminent King West condo experience.

"DNA3 is the most exciting project to come to King West in 2011, and the release of these incredible top-floor suites is only adding to the excitement," says Riz Dhanji, vice-president of sales and marketing for Canderel Residential.

Designed by Graziani & Corazza Architects, DNA3 is a sleek, two-tower development with approximately 600 units is positioned right in the heart of Toronto's vibrant and trendy King West district.

Sub-penthouse and penthouse suites range from 1 bedroom, 1 bed + dens, 2 bedrooms, 2 bedrooms + dens and 2 storey lofts with 18-foot-high ceilings and floor-to-ceiling windows. Prices today start in the $300,000's and go to just over $450,000, although industry insiders expect prices to rise later this Fall with the anticipated start of construction.



Like the two DNA projects that preceded it, DNA3 leads the industry with cutting-edge design, ample amenities and fabulous finishes. "We set the bar for quality and finishes with the first two DNAs," says Dhanji, noting that the previous projects have enjoyed the highest resale values of all buildings in the area. "They've become the most sought-after condominium projects in King West."

DNA3 takes things to a new level, boasting 20,000 square feet of retail space at the podium, the most of any condo in the King West strip. In terms of amenities, DNA3 delivers big time with an impressive 6,000 square feet of space, including a second-floor rooftop terrace with semi-private lounges and intimate dining areas, as well as barbecues, cabana beds, a sundeck and misting station.

Get in an invigorating workout at DNA3's state-of-the-art fitness centre, which includes an aerobics and yoga room. Afterward, retire to the relaxing rain room, complete with comfy spa beds and LCD screens.
If you need to cool off after a serious tanning session or vigorous workout, DNA3's sundeck comes equipped with a special misting station – just the thing to help you refresh and recharge.

Then, when the moment comes to mix and mingle, DNA3 is the place to be, with three private party rooms, a lounge area with bar and fireplace, a games room and a theatre room. The suites, designed by world-renowned Toronto-based firm Cecconi Simone, have spacious open-concept layouts, nine-foot ceilings and engineered wood flooring. Most suites also include a private balcony or terrace.

DNA3's European-inspired two-tone kitchens feature Caesar stone countertops with back-painted glass backsplash, as well as a large island and European stainless steel appliances, including an integrated fridge.

Bathrooms boast designer fixtures, contemporary vanities, porcelain tile, a custom Corian sink, deep soaker tub and mirrored medicine cabinet with sandblasted mirror surround.

DNA3's innovative 7,000-square-foot sales centre, enables visitors to take a virtual tour of the condo before it's built, with real-life replications of the suites and common areas, including the chilled-out rooftop terrace.

"Simply no other King West condo boasts the high-end finishes and amenities that we're offering at DNA3 at such great prices," says Dhanji. "With the release of our top-floor sub-penthouses and penthouses, we're giving discerning condo buyers everything they could possibly want, and in one of Toronto's best areas."

1. Monde //////////////////// The glass and masonry of Monde is a delicate balance between architecture and nature. International architect, Moshe Safdie, design team, Cecconi Simone, landscape designer, Janet Rosenberg and renowned developer, Great Gulf, have collaborated to create a building that is truly one of a kind. Rising to quality standards and targeting LEED Gold, this iconic building will soon become downtown's waterfront and city landmark.

2. Sherbourne Common ////////////// Designed by Phillips Farevaag Smallenberg, Sherbourne Common is a 21st century expression of outdoor space in an urban environment. The jewels of this urban jungle are three large sculptures by Vancouver artist Jill Anholt. These awesome pieces are part of the storm water treatment facility that is brilliantly melded with a zinc-clad pavilion and outdoor splash pad, just outside Monde's front door.

3. Gardens in the Sky //////// Suites at Monde celebrate nature with spacious balconies and spectacular lake and city views. Uniquely designed, generous balconies punctuate the building's exterior, like gardens in the sky. Perpendicular from the building, each staggered balcony is crowned by two storeys of open space.

4. The New Blue Edge ///// The face of Toronto is changing at the water's edge. Waterfront Toronto, the largest urban revitalization project in North America, will reconnect people to the city's waterfront with a vibrant master-planned community. New residences, retail space and waterfront parks will create a new public and cultural destination for live, work and play. Welcome to the New Blue Edge.

Harvest time and the cooking is easy

Today is the first full day of fall and food is making its transition from light to hearty Try this Pork Tenderloin with Cherry Rhubarb Compote For dessert, serve a Fruit Cobbler

DINNER EXPRESS

EMILY RICHARDS
FOOD@METRONEWS.CA

With cherries and rhubarb, this compote comes together perfectly. Meanwhile, a little crust on the pork tenderloin gives it a golden brown colour and great texture. Serve this up as an appetizer, however it makes an easy dinner as well with your favourite pinot noir.

Ingredients:

- 1/4 cup (50 mL) panko breadcrumbs
- 1 tbsp (15 mL) chopped parsley
- 1 small clove garlic, minced
- 1/2 tsp (2 mL) chopped fresh thyme
- 2 tsp (10 mL) Dijon mustard
- Pinch each salt and pepper
- 1 pork tenderloin, about 12 oz/375 g
- 1 tbsp (15 mL) canola oil
- 1 baguette, sliced

Cherry Rhubarb Compote:

- 1 cup (250 mL) chopped fresh rhubarb
- 3/4 cup (175 mL) halved pitted cherries
- 2 tbsp (25 mL) packed brown sugar
- 1 tbsp (15 mL) butter

EMILY RICHARDS

▶ This recipe makes about 24 pieces.

Preparation:

1. Cherry Rhubarb Compote: In saucepan, combine rhubarb, cherries, brown sugar and butter over medium heat and stir occasionally until butter is melted. Cover and cook for 5 minutes. Stir and remove from heat.
2. Meanwhile, in shallow dish combine breadcrumbs, parsley, garlic and thyme. Spread mustard all over pork tenderloin and sprinkle with salt and pepper. Roll and press breadcrumb mixture all over pork tenderloin.
3. In oven proof skillet, heat oil over medium high heat and brown tenderloin on all sides. Place skillet in 400 F (200 C) oven for about 20 minutes or until hint of pink remains and thermometer inserted in tenderloin reaches 155 F (68 C). Let stand 5 minutes before slicing.
4. Serve 1 pork slice on baguette slice and top with compote. Repeat with remaining pork, baguette and compote.

▶ Top the cobbler with non-fat frozen yogurt.

Fruit Cobbler Preparation:

1. Preheat oven to 190 C (350 F). Arrange fruit in bottom of baking dish.
2. Sprinkle 30 ml (2 tbsp) of sugar over fruit. Set aside. In bowl, combine flour, baking soda, cinnamon and salt. Mix with fork and set aside.
3. In mixing bowl, beat butter and remaining 75 ml (1/3 cup) sugar until blended and smooth. Beat in egg and vanilla. Beat in half of the flour mixture. Beat in milk. Beat in remaining flour mixture and almonds.
4. Drop spoonfuls of batter on top of the fruit, leaving a 1-cm (1/2-inch) border all around the edge of the dish to leave room for expansion.
5. Bake for 40 until top is golden brown and fruit is tender and bubbly. Let cool 5 to 10 minutes before serving.

THE CANADIAN PRESS/ ALMOND BOARD OF CALIFORNIA

Ingredients:

- 1 l (4 cups) fresh fruit

Wells does some damage

Former Blue Jay hits a homer and drives in four runs as Angels beat Toronto

7	2
ANGELS	BLUE JAYS

NATHAN DENETTE/THE CANADIAN PRESS

▶ Jose Bautista throws his helmet off after hitting a pop-up out against the Angels last night.

Former Blue Jay Vernon Wells hit a home run and drove in four runs and Dan Haren pitched eight solid innings as the Los Angeles Angels defeated Toronto 7-2 last night.

Wells hit a two-run single against reliever Jesse Litsch in the sixth and hit a two-run homer, his 24th of the season, in the eighth against reliever Casey Janssen.

Angels centre-fielder Peter Bourjos hit his 12th homer and tripled in a three-hit game as the Angels won their second in a row from the Blue Jays. Maicer Izturis had three hits and two RBIs for the Angels who outhit the Blue Jays 14-6.

Haren (16-9) held the Blue Jays to four hits — including Eric Thames' 11th homer of the season to lead off the sixth — and one run.

He ended the eighth inning when a line drive by Thames hit his left arm and deflected to second baseman Izturis who got the out at first. Haren went down in pain but walked off the field.

The Blue Jays scored a run in the ninth on a double by Kelly Johnson against Hisanori Takahashi.

The Angels who lost the first game of the four-game series will try to win the series today in the Blue Jays' final home game of the season.

Dustin McGowan (0-1) had a solid start as he continues his comeback from two shoulder surgeries.

He allowed five hits and two runs and struck out eight in five innings in his third start and fourth outing since returning to the majors for the first time since 2008.

Bourjos did most of the damage against McGowan, scoring in the third after a leadoff triple and hitting a home run in the fifth.

The Angels (85-70) took the lead with a run in the third with a one-out single by Izturis through the drawn-in infield scoring Bourjos who led off with his 10th triple of the season.

Lawrie done

Brett Lawrie's season is over after he fractured his right middle finger and was placed on the 15-day disabled list yesterday.

- The 21-year-old third baseman took a ground ball off the finger while fielding during batting practice and he left the field. He later had X-rays, which revealed the fracture.
- Lawrie batted .293 with nine home runs and 25 runs batted in 43 games since making his major-league debut on Aug. 5.
- Edwin Encarnacion took his place at third base last night while David Cooper stepped in as designated hitter.

▶ Bryzgalov

Prized free-agent goaltender Ilya Bryzgalov, making his first appearance as a Flyer, allowed stick-side goals to Juraj Mikus, Matt Frattin and Joe Colborne, as the Toronto Maple Leafs defeated Philadelphia 4-2 last night.

Displaying a new Philadelphia-themed mask, Bryzgalov, who signed a $51-million US, nine-year contract in June, received a loud ovation from a sparse crowd when introduced. But he was a bit shaky, as Mikus, pinching in from the point, beat him top shelf with a wristshot at 15:54 of the first.

Frattin whacked a rolling puck past him from 20 feet out at 14:31 of the second, as the two teams completed a two-day, home-and-home, pre-season split.

Jaguars switch QBs: Rookie Gabbert to start

McCown benched after tossing four interceptions

The Jacksonville Jaguars have their third starting quarterback in 15 days. They believe this one could be the guy for 15 years.

Coach Jack Del Rio named Blaine Gabbert the starter yesterday, switching signal callers three days after Luke McCown threw four interceptions against the New York Jets. The move comes a little more than a week after Del Rio released veteran starter David Garrard following a poor pre-season and a three-interception practice.

Gabbert will make his first start Sunday at Carolina.

"He's a big strong kid who's really been kind of a star quarterback his whole life," Del Rio said. "We think he has a chance to be a franchise-type quarterback. He's getting a chance now to be our starting quarterback and become that guy."

SAM GREENWOOD/GETTY IMAGES

"You're always going to have butterflies. ... That just means the adrenaline's going and you're ready to go."

BLAINE GABBERT, ON MAKING HIS FIRST NFL START

The transition was inevitable since the Jaguars selected Gabbert with the 10th pick in April's draft. Del Rio had hoped to take it slow with the former Missouri standout, even planning to give him a year to watch and learn behind Garrard. But Garrard struggled in the pre-season and was outplayed by McCown, a career backup.

Del Rio named McCown the starter five days before the season opener. McCown did enough to win the opener against Tennessee, but his ninth start in eight seasons was a debacle. He was picked off four times, could have thrown a couple more and was sacked for a safety — all in just three quarters.

I am in full agreement with everyone who has given testimony in regards to the jobs the shaman has done for us. In my case, witchcraft was making my wife ill, making me poor and for that reason I went to see the Shaman. He gave me the solution and showed me the face of my enemy.
Thank you Shaman.

PropertyGuys.com™

Toronto home owner saves $70,000 with PropertyGuys.com

When the PropertyGuys.com sign was installed on Grace Bogaert's lawn, the neighbours questioned her decision to sell her home herself. But thanks to the help of the PropertyGuys.com Toronto team, Grace was able to sell her property, located in the affluent Cricket Club area of Toronto, for 97 per cent of the asking price.

With 46,668 listings to date, PropertyGuys.com is North America's largest, most respected and fastest growing private sale network. Comprised of a network of business savvy professionals working in communities across Canada, PropertyGuys.com helps homeowners sell their home and pay themselves. Now that their clients have access to the agent listing website, it is easier than ever to sell privately and save expensive agent commissions.

The PropertyGuys.com business model allowed Grace to get the help she needed to sell her home quickly and easily.

"Selling through PropertyGuys.com was a thoroughly pleasant and hassle-free experience," says Grace. "We sold our home within three weeks and saved over $70,000 in real estate commissions."

According to Grace, when the buyer saw the house he talked about making an offer the same day.

"The negotiation process was quite stress-free, absent of any pressure tactics or fear-inducing commentary that might otherwise be present with an agent," she says. "Each party used a lawyer to bring the deal to a close, and on our side we also had our Private Sale Professional from PropertyGuys.com to provide advice and support along the way."

"Services like PropertyGuys.com help empower home owners to take control of the sale of what is often their most valuable investment," says Grace

With PropertyGuys.com, it's about more than just putting up a sign. A Private Sale Professional is with you every step of the way - from developing the right marketing plan to the day the sold sign is installed. Their innovative website also helps to generate buyer leads and has effective user tools that help sellers navigate through the paperwork and handle their real estate negotiations.

Someone will make a small fortune selling your house. WILL IT BE YOU?

Today's horoscope

For today's crossword answers and for expanded horoscopes, go to metronews.ca

♈ Aries March 21-April 20 You need to make the first move in personal relationships and Venus, planet of love, will help you today.

♉ Taurus April 21-May 21 No matter how busy you may be, you must set aside some time for gazing at the bigger picture.

♊ Gemini May 22-June 21 For some reason, everyone wants to be nice to you today. It's nice to be so much in demand.

♋ Cancer June 22-July 22 Try to be a bit more forgiving of someone who has let you down.

♌ Leo July 23-Aug.23 You seem to be brooding on things that are over and done with. You cannot go back and change the past.

♍ Virgo Aug. 24- Sept. 22 If you need to approach a loved one or family member for assistance do so — this very minute.

♎ Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23 Anything seems possible, but how much you achieve depends on whether you make an effort.

♏ Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 22 You are incredibly ambitious of late, but don't be too pushy today.

♐ Sagittarius Nov. 23-Dec. 21 The planets urge you to form alliances with people who share your aims and ambitions.

♑ Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 20 If you need to impress someone in a position of authority, do it now.

♒ Aquarius Jan. 21-Feb. 18 The planets make it easy for you to get away from your current environment. Start your journey.

♓ Pisces Feb. 19-March 20. You may be tempted to splash out on a luxury, but is that really a good idea? Think. SALLY BROMPTON
